

How Can I Help?

Many women from developing countries are anxious to come to the Sakyadhita Conference in Malaysia, but need your support. A contribution of $500-800 will enable a laywoman or nun from Bangladesh, Cambodia, India, Laos, Nepal, Sri Lanka, Tibet, or Vietnam to attend the conference. We welcome your ideas, suggestions, and participation in the conference planning!

Please let us know if you are qualified and would like to help with the translation and editing of papers, simultaneous interpretation, informal interpretation during discussion groups, or can help in other ways.

9th Sakyadhita International Conference on Buddhist Women

Buddhist Women in a Global Multicultural Community

Kuala Lumpur, Malaysia
June 17 to 21, 2006

Sakyadhita, “Daughters of Buddha”

Sakyadhita International Association of Buddhist Women was founded in 1987 in Bodhgaya, India. Sakyadhita is an alliance of Buddhist women dedicated to nurturing women’s potential for compassionate social action through networking, education, publications, and training. Since 1987, Sakyadhita has held conferences regularly to unite Buddhist women worldwide and work towards gender equity in the Buddhist traditions.

Sakyadhita Conference Aims

- to unite Buddhist women worldwide
- to promote their welfare
- to foster gender equity
- to encourage mutual understanding
- facilitate Buddhist women’s work for the benefit of humanity

About Malaysia

Malaysia is located in Southeast Asia, with Thailand to the north, Singapore and Indonesia to the south, the Philippines to the east, and the Indian Ocean to the west. The provinces of Sabah and Sarawak are located on the north coast of Borneo across the South China Sea. Malaysia’s climate is tropical and its rich landscape includes dense jungles, sandy beaches, lush rain forests, picturesque towns, and the bustling urban metropolis of the capital city, Kuala Lumpur.

In 1963, Malaysia was formed from the former British colonies of Malaya, Sabah, Sarawak, and Singapore. In 1965, Singapore broke away and became independent. Malaysia’s diverse population includes Malays, Chinese, Indians, indigenous tribal peoples, and other groups. Muslim mosques stand nearby Buddhist temples and Hindu shrines. The Malays (55%) are Muslim, the Chinese and Sinhalese (35%) are generally Buddhist, and the Indians (10%) are generally Hindu or Muslim.

Malaysia is a constitutional monarchy with nine hereditary sultans who select the head of state every five years. The official language is Bahasa Malaysia, with English spoken widely. Other languages include Iban, Tamil, and Chinese dialects such as Mandarin, Cantonese, Hokkien, and Hakka.

Buddhism in Malaysia

The earliest historical record of Buddhism in the Malay peninsula is the visit of the Chinese monk Fa Xian in 413 CE. Archaeological artifacts excavated at Kedah (north of Penang) are evidence of the first phase of Buddhist cultural development, between the fifth and tenth centuries CE. The second phase of Buddhist influence dates to Chinese immigration in the seventeenth century. The current phase is a flourishing of international influences from Sri Lanka, Taiwan, and Tibet.

Travel Tips

The climate in Malaysia is sunny and warm, with occasional tropical showers. Summer clothes are best, but out of respect for our host culture, shorts, tank tops, and revealing clothes are not appropriate.

Conference Fees

The conference fee is $300 for Sakyadhita members and $350 for non-members. The fee includes conference registration, simple accommodations, and vegetarian meals for five days. The cost of the temple tour is $120, inclusive of transportation, temple accommodations, and vegetarian meals. Hotel accommodations are also available upon request, at an additional cost, for both the conference and the tour. Transportation from the airport to the conference site will be provided for arrivals on June 16, and for departures on June 22 and 25. The fee for round-trip airport transportation is $30. Registration and payment must be received by May 15, 2006.
